Notice of Intention to Designate a Historic Resource

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 1706

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Community Development intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Walker School together with the land legally described as:

All that portion of the southerly three hundred and thirty (330) feet in perpendicular width throughout of the southeast quarter of Section 5, Township 56, Range 20, West of the Fourth Meridian, which lies east of the lands subdivided under Plan 1186 TR and west of a line drawn parallel with the east boundary of the said quarter section through a point on the south boundary thereof three hundred and thirty (330) feet westerly from the southeast corner of the said quarter section containing 1.01 hectares more or less. Excepting thereout all mines and minerals.

and municipally located in the Town of Bruderheim, Alberta

be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The heritage value of the Walker School in Bruderheim lies chiefly in its architectural significance as a good example of four-room schools and early twentieth century rural school design in Alberta.

During the early twentieth century, the four-room school house was a common arrangement of space for schools being built in Alberta that required larger facilities than the traditional one-room school house could allow. The provincial government provided support to school districts through matching funds for construction, and by providing architectural plans. This explains why identical or very similar schools were built all over Alberta. The Provincial Archives of Alberta has plans for four-room schoolhouses for 69 school districts, dating from 1913 through to 1964. Designed for the Bruderheim School District No. 1705 in 1928 by the Edmonton architectural firm of MacDonald and Magoon, the Walker School is a typical variation on the four-room plan. Built the following year, the school marked a significant advancement over the pioneer schools built previously by the Moravian settlers in the region. Separate boys' and girls' playrooms downstairs were topped by classrooms, a common science classroom upstairs, and a staff area upstairs. In this way the Walker School serves as a strong example of a quintessential school design in Alberta.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Community Development intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Northern Alberta Railway Station together with the land legally described as:

Plan 912 0796, Block A, Lot B Excepting thereout all mines and minerals.

and municipally located at Main Street and Railway Avenue in Sexsmith, Alberta

be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The heritage value of the Northern Alberta Railway (N.A.R.) Station lies in its association with the development of transportation and agriculture in Sexsmith, a significant regional service centre in Northern Alberta and one of the province's most productive farming areas. It also possesses heritage value as an excellent example of typical railway architecture and as a symbol of the centrality of railways in the settlement and agricultural development of Alberta.

In 1916, the Edmonton-Dunvegan and British Columbia (ED and BC) railway company was nearing completion of a spur line between Rycroft and Grande Prairie. The new railway line stimulated the creation of the townsite of Benville, located along the track just north of Grande Prairie. Renamed Sexsmith shortly after its establishment, this new settlement was soon the centre of a thriving farming community, but because of the volatility of company finances, it did not get a proper railway station immediately. Between 1919 and 1928, Sexsmith was serviced by a basic, inexpensive railway office and a warehouse. It was not until 1928 that this railway station was built. A year after the station's construction, the ED and BC line was taken over by the Canadian Pacific Railway (C.P.R.) and the Canadian National Railway (C.N.R.), who operated it jointly under a subsidiary company called Northern Alberta Railways (N.A.R.). Over the succeeding decades, this new station handled the storage and shipping of grain from one of the most productive agricultural regions in North America. The real boom years of Sexsmith and area began during World War Two, when wartime prices and demand for grain resulted in massive agricultural exports. During this period, the community often led all inland terminals in the British Empire in grain shipment. By the mid-1950s, Sexsmith had nine elevators. However, at the same time that the community's agricultural production was surging, its railway business was diminishing because of improvements in highways. The N.A.R. Station closed in the early 1970s and was sold to a local farm implements dealer, who relocated and partially restored it.

One of the few remaining N.A.R. structures still extant in the province, the station is a 'Type B' design, constructed by Kezer and Loven of Grande Prairie for the ED and BC. This type of design is distinguished by its bell-cast roof and shed dormers; the maroon paint, added in 1929, marks it as an N.A.R. building. The interior consisted of an office, waiting room, freight room, and washroom facilities on the main floor and living quarters for the station agent and his family on the upper level. The main-floor office also accommodated the district telegraph. In the 1980s, the station was relocated close its original site and the restoration work was carried out. The building is a powerful physical symbol of the significance of railways in the settlement of Alberta and the development of an agricultural economy.

Attachment A

The heritage value of the Canadian Northern Railway (C.No.R.) lies in its architectural significance as a fine example of a Third Class, Plan 100-29 railway station and in its symbolic value as an emblem of the central role of railways in opening the province to settlement and agriculture.

In 1911, the C.No.R. constructed a "Third Class" station in Camrose according to the company's Plan 100-29. Plan 100-29 was the third of four "Third Class" station designs developed for the C.No.R. by influential architect Ralph Benjamin Pratt. Each of the "Third Class" stations designed by Pratt was distinguished by its hip roof - a unique feature that immediately branded the stations as Canadian Northern constructions. The main floor of the building accommodated a waiting room and office, while the upper level contained living quarters for the stationmaster. The station also possessed a sizable, single storey wing that served as a baggage area. Initially, the building featured a shingled exterior as per C.No.R architectural plans. In 1918, the Canadian Northern Railway was amalgamated into the Canadian National Railway (C.N.R.); in 1937, the C.N.R. stuccoed the exterior - a common practice by the company to standardize the appearance of its stations, some of which it had absorbed from the defunct Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific (G.T.P.) Railway companies. The Camrose C.No.R. Station is one of the oldest surviving examples of this particular type of depot in the province. Two separate ancillary buildings - a tool shed and a workingman's shed - were moved to the site in the early 1920s; they are consistent with the types of outbuildings constructed by the C.No.R. during this period.

With the gradual disappearance of early train stations from Alberta's communities, buildings like the Camrose C.No.R. Station have gained increased historic significance as potent structural reminders of the essential role that the railways played in establishing settlement and agricultural economy in the province.

and municipally located at Railway Drive in Smoky Lake, Alberta

be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The heritage value of the Canadian Northern Railway (C.No.R.) Station at Smoky Lake lies in its architectural significance as a fine example of a Third Class, Plan 100-72 railway station and in its symbolic value as an emblem of the central role of railways in opening the province to settlement and agriculture.

In 1918, as World War One neared its conclusion, the federal government established the Soldiers' Settlement Board, an agency designed to assist returning veterans acquire land and reintegrate into civilian life. In response to the initiative, the C.No.R. extended its line northeast of Edmonton to Smoky Lake, a community perceived to be an ideal venue for the repatriated soldiers. In 1919, the C.No.R. built a "Third Class", Plan 100-72 station at Smoky Lake to serve the community. The station was typical of small rural stations constructed at the time. Designed by influential Winnipeg architect, Ralph Benjamin Pratt, the station featured a high hipped roof with gabled dormers - an architectural element that Pratt effectively developed into an instantly recognizable trademark for C.No.R. stations. The main floor included a waiting area and office while the second storey provided living quarters for the station agent. A baggage room to the west offered space for freight storage. When it was initially built, the station's exterior was clad in wood shingling. In 1920, the C.No.R. was amalgamated into the Canadian National Railway (C.N.R.); in 1936, the C.N.R. covered the shingle siding in stucco and added the company's corporate colours of forest green and gold to the building's trim - a standard C.N.R. practice that homogenized the appearance of stations along lines absorbed by the company. The station was closed in the 1980s. The Smoky Lake C.No.R. Station is one of the oldest surviving examples of this particular type of depot in Alberta.

With the gradual disappearance of early train stations from Alberta's communities, buildings like the Smoky Lake C.No.R. Station have gained increased historic significance as potent structural reminders of the essential role that the railways played in establishing settlement and agricultural economy in the province.

The heritage value of Atlantic No. 3 Wild Well Site lies in its identity as the location of Alberta's greatest oilfield disaster. As the place of this significant historic event, the site also garnered international notoriety, attracting worldwide interest and subsequent investment in the Alberta petroleum industry. Atlantic No. 3 is additionally significant for initiating enhanced regulatory standards and the development of oil and gas related technology and well control training.

1947 and 1948 were banner years for the oil and gas industry in Alberta. With the tremendous gusher of Imperial Oil Well No. 1 (also known as Leduc No. 1) near Devon, the Province really entered into the oil age. Several other significant strikes made Alberta Canada's leading petroleum producer. On January 15, 1948 drilling proved successful at tycoon Frank MacMahon's nearby well, Atlantic No. 3. Oil gushed out of the ground to a height of 150 feet. It was pressured by an estimated 15 million cubic feet per day flow. Such enormous pressure, unregulated by 'blow-out' precautions, led on March 15 to the fracturing of the surrounding area. Natural gas and oil began to escape over a wide radius, causing serious concern and emergency measures. On May 15, 1948 the Petroleum and Gas Conservation Board, through an Order-in-Council, took control of the well. Over a million barrels of oil was produced and recovered from Atlantic No. 3 during a six month period, considered by many to be an unparalleled rate. The well ran wild until September 6, when a spark from an unknown source ignited, causing the largest oil well disaster in Canadian history. Flames leapt more than one hundred feet in the air and billows of acrid smoke could be seen for more than one hundred miles, while the whole atmosphere around most of Alberta was perceptibly darkened. Through the intervention of famous well control specialists Myron Kinley and Red Adair, the blaze was quelled by November 1948. Major news services reported the story worldwide, and film footage from the Atlantic No. 3 Wild Well Site blaze was featured on the Movietone News in theatres. The disaster's notoriety, to the delight of industry leaders, conveyed the news of Alberta's extensive petroleum resources to the international market and brought international money into Alberta to finance the rapidly expanding oil industry.

After the disaster at the Atlantic No. 3 Wild Well Site, enhanced regulatory standards were mandated and initiated by the petroleum industry in Alberta. The Petroleum and Gas Conservation Board, administered by the Alberta Government, required that the standards for blow out prevention be upgraded and that surface casing requirements be sufficient to withstand extremely high pressures. Since the disaster, limited crop development has taken place on the Atlantic No. 3 Wild Well Site. Environmental studies have been undertaken to assess and quantify the effects of the disaster on the area's soil, and have gleaned important information for subsequent rehabilitation of other areas impacted by petroleum-related accidents. The site continues to yield scientific information to the University of Alberta and for the benefit of industry and the environment.

Notice of Intention to Designate a Historic Resource
(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2173

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Community Development intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Alberta Grain Company Grain Elevator, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 062 5107, Block 9, Lot 2

and municipally located at 4A Meadowview Drive in the City of St. Albert

be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The Alberta Grain Company Grain Elevator possesses heritage value as one of the oldest extant elevators in the province built by one of its earliest grain companies, the Alberta Grain Company. It is also significant for its association with an unusual number of grain handling companies that feature prominently in Alberta's economic history: the Alberta Grain Company, the Alberta Pacific Grain Company, the Federal Grain Company and the Alberta Wheat Pool.

The construction of two rail lines to Edmonton - the Calgary and Edmonton (C & E) Railway in 1891 and the Canadian Northern Railway (CNoR) in 1905 - opened up central-northern Alberta to agricultural settlement and spurred the growth of a grain economy in the region. In anticipation of the CNoR line being extended west to St. Albert, and caught up in the optimism about the area's prospects for development, the Alberta Grain Company built the elevator in 1906 (although the line was not extended for another three years). The 30,000 bushel, rectangular, gasoline-powered structure is one of the earliest extant elevators in Alberta; indeed, the first elevator of this type in Alberta had been built only ten years before.

The Alberta Grain Company Grain Elevator also provides rare structural evidence of an unusual number of companies who played leading roles in the province's grain economy. The building was owned by the Alberta Grain Company, the Alberta Pacific Grain Company, the Federal Grain Company, and finally acquired by the Alberta Wheat Pool in 1972. The elevator was extensively remodeled in 1937 to increase its capacity, by raising the structure vertically in order to enlarge the bins. This was a technique for moving higher volumes of grain before the construction of adjacent annexes became common. Consequently the elevator was able to operate until 1989 when St. Albert was closed as a railway point for grain export.

Together, the 1906 Alberta Grain Company Grain Elevator and the 1929 Alberta Wheat Pool Grain Elevator form an elevator row that is a landmark for the community of St. Albert.

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2174

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Community Development intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Alberta Wheat Pool Grain Elevator, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 062 5107, Block 9, Lot 3

and municipally located at 4A Meadowview Drive in the City of St. Albert

be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The historical significance of the Alberta Wheat Pool (A.W.P.) Grain Elevator lies in its ability to provide structural evidence of the activities of the A.W.P., which played a critical role in the political, economic and social life of the province's farmers throughout the twentieth century.

The grain economy of central Alberta was established at the turn of the twentieth century when the region was opened for settlement by the construction of two railways to Edmonton. The Canadian Northern (after 1919, the Canadian National) Railway then reached St. Albert in 1909. In 1929, the A.W.P. constructed the agricultural district's largest grain elevator to date, just east of the town's first elevator (built by the Alberta Grain Company in 1906). The 1929 35,000 bushel elevator was derived from the standard plans used by the A.W.P. at the end of the 1920s as it was undergoing its initial period of rapid expansion. This is one of the oldest remaining A.W.P. elevators.

The elevator is also significant for its association with the Alberta Wheat Pool, a cooperative founded in 1923 during the administration of the United Farmers of Alberta (1921-35). Like other wheat pools, it sought to maximize returns to farmers by marketing their grain directly to the Central Selling Agency in Winnipeg, providing an alternative to selling through middlemen and the Grain Exchange. By the mid-twentieth century the A.W.P. had more elevators in Alberta than any other company. In 1967 it acquired the neighbouring Alberta Grain Company Elevator in St. Albert. The A.W.P. Grain Elevator retains a good degree of integrity and is a rare example of an A.W.P. elevator, as many have been demolished and the Pool merged into Agricore in 1998.

The grain elevator's tall silhouette became an icon for the prairie west in the first half of the century. The Alberta Grain Company Grain Elevator and the Alberta Wheat Pool Grain Elevator form an elevator row that is a landmark for the community of St. Albert.

RULES (GENERAL)

1.1 Amendment - The following is added after Part 16:

Part 16.1

192.1 In this Part, “equity security” means any security of an issuer that carries the residual right to participate in

- (a) the earnings of the issuer, and
- (b) the assets of the issuer on the liquidation or the winding-up of the issuer.

192.2 For the purposes of Part 17.01 of the Act, “market capitalization” means, in respect of an issuer, the amount determined as follows:

- (a) for each class of equity securities for which there is a published market, determine the sum of the number of outstanding securities of the class at the close of trading on each of the 10 trading days before the day on which the misrepresentation was made or the failure to make timely disclosure first occurred;
- (b) divide the sum determined under clause (a) by 10;
- (c) multiply the quotient determined under clause (b) for each class by the trading price of the securities of the class on the principal market for the securities for the 10 trading days before the day on which the misrepresentation was made or the failure to make timely disclosure first occurred;
- (d) add the amounts determined under clause (c) for each class of equity securities for which there is a published market;
- (e) for each class of equity securities not traded on a published market, determine the fair market value of the outstanding securities of that class as of the day on which the misrepresentation was made or the failure to make timely disclosure first occurred;
- (f) add the amounts determined under clause (e) for each class of equity securities not traded on a published market; and
- (g) add the amount determined under clause (d) to the amount determined under clause (f) to determine the market capitalization of the issuer.

192.3 For the purposes of Part 17.01 of the Act, “principal market” means, in respect of a class of securities of a responsible issuer,

- (a) the published market in Canada on which the greatest volume of trading in securities of that class occurred during the 10 trading days before the day on which the misrepresentation was made or the failure to make timely disclosure first occurred, or 192.4 For the purposes of Part 17.01 of the Act, “trading price” means, in respect of a security of a class of securities for which there is a published market, the amount determined under the following rules:

- (a) subject to clauses (b) and (c), the trading price of the security is the volume weighted average price of securities of that class on the published market during the period for which the trading price is to be determined;

- (b) subject to clause (c), if there was trading in the securities of that class in the published market on fewer than half of the trading days during the period for which the trading price of the securities is to be determined, the trading price of the security is determined as follows:
 - (i) calculate the sum of the average of the highest bid and lowest ask prices for each trading day in the period on which there were no trades in securities of that class in the published market,
 - (ii) divide the amount determined under subclause (i) by the number of trading days on which there were no trades in securities of that class in the published market,
 - (iii) add to the amount determined under subclause (ii) the volume weighted average price of securities of that class on the published market for those trading days on which securities of that class were traded,
 - (iv) divide by two the amount determined under subclause (iii);
- (c) if there were no trades of securities of that class in the published market during the period for which the trading price is to be determined, the trading price of the security is the fair market value of the security.

192.5(1) Part 17.01 of the Act applies to the acquisition of an issuer's security pursuant to an exemption from section 110 of the Act that is set out in clause 2.8 of National Instrument 45-102 Resale of Securities, which exemption is prescribed for the purposes of section 211.02 (b) of the Act.
