Culture and Community Spirit

Notice of Intention to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource (Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2252

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in the Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Strathcona Collegiate Institute, together with the land legally described as:

Plan I3
Block 81
Lots 19 to 36 Inclusive and municipally located at 10523 – 84 Avenue in Edmonton, Alberta be designated as a PROVINCIAL HISTORIC RESOURCE under Section 20 of the HISTORICAL RESOURCES ACT, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows:

The heritage value of the Strathcona Collegiate Institute lies in its long and distinguished history as an educational institution, including its early service as one of the original institutional hosts of the University of Alberta. It is also significant as an excellent example of a major western Canadian high school of the early twentieth century.

In 1908, the Government of Alberta purchased land just west of the City of Strathcona for the campus of the University of Alberta. Planning and construction of the campus would take several years, however, and in the interim the university's Board of Governors rented classroom and office space from the Strathcona Public School Board. The first university courses were held in 1908 in the Duggan Street School (present-day Queen Alexandra School). These quarters proved cramped and inadequate for the university's institutional needs. The following year, the university moved into the Strathcona Collegiate Institute, so named for its original association with post-secondary education. During its first two years of operation, the Strathcona Collegiate Institute's main floor housed four high school classrooms while the second floor contained four university classrooms, University President Henry Marshall Tory's office, and the university library. The basement included gymnasiums for boys and girls and the upper level contained an auditorium with a stage. The first University of Alberta convocation took place in the Strathcona Collegiate Institute in 1909 when an honorary Doctor of Laws degree was bestowed on Lord Strathcona. The building continued to serve both high school and university students until 1911, when the University of Alberta moved west to its current location. The school, now known as Old Scona Academic High School, has continued to serve as an educational institution until the present day and boasts several distinguished alumni. It is the oldest active secondary school in the City of Edmonton.

The cornerstone of the Strathcona Collegiate Institute was laid by Premier Alexander Rutherford in 1907, the same year that the community of Strathcona was incorporated as a city. The scale and elegant design of the school reflected the optimism and civic confidence of the community. Designed by prominent local architect Roland Lines, the Strathcona Collegiate Institute was created to be one of the largest and most sophisticated high schools in the province. Its up-to-date design shows the influence of contemporary English architects such as Edwin Lutyens. They pioneered a new kind of architecture which, while it was clearly connected with historical antecedents, avoided both the slavish reproduction of classical designs and the theatrical adaptations characteristic of Victorian architecture. Described as the Edwardian Classical Free Style, this architecture blended elements from Greek, Roman, and Renaissance architecture in a totally new way, creating a pleasing and modern style. In the Strathcona Collegiate Institute, these elements included volutes, quoins, a dome, bracketed eaves, arched hoods above the doorways and gables, rusticated stonework, and oculus windows with oversize voussoirs. The interior featured state-of-the-art science labs, spacious common areas, and classrooms with exterior and interior windows.
