Culture and Community Spirit

Notice of Intent to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource (Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 151

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as:

Calgary Fire Hall No. 1, together with the land legally described as:

Plan C, Block 31, Lots 21 to 26 inclusive, Excepting thereout..., Portion for road on Plan 8610026, Excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located at 140 - 6 Avenue, SE in Calgary, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, R.S.A. 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of Calgary Fire Hall No. 1 lies chiefly in its historical and architectural significance for its association with the history of firefighting in Alberta, its connection to James "Cappy" Smart, and its excellent representation of an early twentieth-century, urban fire station.

Built in 1911 to replace Calgary's first Fire Headquarters, which had been erected in 1887, Calgary Fire Hall No. 1 represented advances in fire-fighting characteristic of the pre-war boom in Alberta. Emerging urban areas throughout the west had marked their transition from early settlement communities to more densely populated towns and cities by shifting from buildings constructed predominantly of wood to much more fire retardant structures erected of brick and stone. In the cities, fire departments were making the change from primarily volunteer bucket brigades to professionally trained, paid, and mechanized forces. Important figures such as James "Cappy" Smart, Calgary's first full-time fire chief, spanned the whole era of this historical development. As such, Smart personally participated in the planning of Fire Hall No. 1, and led Calgary's fire fighters from their headquarters there until his retirement in 1933. The station was in continuous use as a fire hall until 1973.

Architecturally, Calgary's Fire Hall No. 1 embodies several elements desirable in state-of-the-art urban fire halls of the period, and stands as one of the premier examples of this building type in Alberta. Designed by architects Lang and Major, the building was designed with a growing city in mind in terms of size and required facilities. Significantly, the building is oriented diagonally towards the street corner, enabling efficient access and ease of departure. Fire Hall No. 1 includes five wide bay doors, and the necessary hose tower required to hang and dry the canvas hoses in use throughout the early to mid-twentieth century. The large central garage area, built with the ability to accommodate the horse-drawn fire carriages, was easily adapted to house Calgary's first fire trucks. Additional spaces such as offices, bedrooms, and lounges provided room to accommodate fire fighters in a state of readiness for their tasks. With its highly identifiable facade, the building has become a well known city landmark.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Bashaw Fire Hall, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 2627AC, Block 14, Lot 1, Excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located at 5018 – 50 Street in Bashaw, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, R.S.A. 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of the Bashaw Fire Hall lies in its historical association with the provision of firefighting services and the consolidation of other necessary municipal services in a multi-use civic building. The structure is also characteristic of small town fire hall construction in Alberta.

The Town of Bashaw developed relatively late in Alberta's early twentieth century settlement boom. Although settlers began arriving in the region during the 1890s, the townsite itself did not develop until the arrival of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in 1910. Bashaw was incorporated as a village in 1911. With most buildings in new communities constructed from wood, fire protection was of paramount importance for most new communities. Communities that demonstrated an ability to offer fire protection received discounted rates on insurance. The Bashaw Fire Hall was the first public building authorized by the village council. Built between 1914 and 1915, it was to serve the village's volunteer fire brigade, but has also served numerous other purposes. It was used for many civic gatherings, such as public forums, meetings of the village council, elections and tax-revision court sessions, well into the 1930s. During the 1950s, a small library, maintained by the Women's Institute, was also housed at the rear of the fire hall. The building also saw significant use as a police station. Starting in the 1920s, the Alberta Provincial Police and/or the municipal police had their detachment here. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police also used the building from 1948 to 1968. The town's fire department remained in the building until 1972. The Bashaw Fire Hall is an excellent example of the type of multi-use civic buildings constructed by small communities throughout Alberta in the early twentieth century.

The Bashaw Fire Hall is a fine example of a vernacular structure that was adapted to meet the changing needs of a small community. In its modest size and simple wood-frame construction, the building is typical of the kind of civic structures erected by rural Alberta communities in the early twentieth century. Decorative elements like the false front, red and white paint scheme, brackets and cornice, and diamond-shaped window in the tower define the building's distinctive character and may reflect the fire hall's civic importance as Bashaw's first public building. The numerous alterations to the building speak to the fire hall's easy adaptability to changing circumstances and needs. Its original identity as a fire hall is clearly evident in the hose-drying tower and 37,000 gallon poured-in-place concrete water tank. The jail cells on the main floor speak to its function as a police station and its versatile interior configuration embodies its general civic use.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as:

Battle River Hospital, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 6696NY, Block 11, Lot 11A, Excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located in the Town of Manning, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, R.S.A. 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of the Battle River Hospital building lies in its historical association with the Women's Missionary Society and its role in the provision of medical services to the booming population in rural, northern Alberta in the mid-twentieth century. The hospital building also has architectural significance, being representative of the "cottage" hospitals that were an essential part of rural medical service.

Following the First World War, Alberta's Peace Country became an attractive area for settlement. This trend was enhanced during the 1930s as people migrated to northern Alberta to escape drought conditions in the south. Seeing the need for a hospital in the Battle River area, the Women's Missionary Society (WMS), a lay organization affiliated with the United Church of Canada, raised funds and secured an agreement with the provincial government to share healthcare costs in that region. The WMS, formed in 1926, was committed to establishing hospitals in Western Canada, on native reservations and in northern communities. The WMS would operate these hospitals until the communities served grew large enough to support the facilities themselves. In 1936, construction began on a hospital midway between the communities of North Star and Notikewin. In August 1937, the eight-bed Battle River Hospital opened. It had a few small wards, an operating room, a nursery and living accommodations for three nurses. The hospital had running water and electricity, which was provided by a gasoline-powered engine. The hospital grew over the ensuing years. An x-ray machine was added in 1944 and a separate nurses' residence was built in 1945 allowing the hospital's second floor to be converted into a nine-bed maternity ward. The area's population continued to grow and the Battle River Hospital soon became too small to effectively meet the region's medical needs. It was replaced by a larger building in 1955, although it continued to be used as an auxiliary hospital until 1959.

Designed by architect Gordon Wynn, the Battle River Hospital represents a particular type of small rural hospital built in Alberta during the inter-war period. It is a one-and-a-half storey, balloon frame building. Its key architectural details include a jerkinhead roof with shed-roofed dormer windows on each slope and imitation half-timbering in the gables inspired by the Tudor style. The exterior walls are buff-coloured stucco with red-brown window frames, door frames, stairs and other trim, replicating the buildings original colours. The first storey has a unique fenestration pattern. The operating room, located on the northwest corner, has five windows giving plenty of light with minimal glare. There is a replica of the late 1940s sign over the front door with the words "BATTLE RIVER HOSPITAL W.M.S. United Church of Canada." The building's interior features an overly wide hall and doorways on the first floor, reflecting its role as a hospital. The hall and doorways on the second floor are of regular dimensions, reflecting its original domestic purpose. Interior walls are painted light green with white trim. Built to serve a sparsely populated but growing rural region with limited financial means, the hospital is quite simple in design. However, while the building's architecture is not outstanding or unique, it does represent trends in non-governmental hospital construction in its period of significance. Even though the Battle River Hospital was built for the sole purpose of providing medical care and was not a converted residence, the residential look of the building places it in the cottage hospital model. In this regard, the building is similar to an extant facility at Beaverlodge, and three demolished buildings at Bentley, Fairview and Morley.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

and municipally located in the County of Grande Prairie, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, R.S.A. 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of Bad Heart Straw Church lies in its status as a pioneering Alberta example of the use of straw as a construction material.

From its formation in the 1920s until the mid-1950s, the community of Bad Heart was without a local church. Surrounded by marginal farmland and cut off from the more heavily settled areas of the Grande Prairie, Bad Heart remained during these decades a small settlement with few amenities. Local residents who wished to attend a church service were compelled to travel to the Teepee Creek district. Father Francis Dales, a Redemptorist priest stationed over 50 kilometres away at Sexsmith, was determined to change that for Bad Heart's Roman Catholic community. A vigorous and highly creative man, Fr. Dales was an experienced architect and beloved pastor. He recognized that the people of Bad Heart possessed only modest resources and seized upon straw bale construction as a practical, economical way to construct a church. First a cement slab was laid down. Salvaged pipes with points welded on the tops were inserted into the slab at three foot intervals. The bales of straw were then pressed down onto the pipes and crowned with metal plates. To simplify the church's design and ensure the stability of the walls and the truss roof, no window openings were included on the sides of the building. Fr. Dales found ways to economize on all aspects of the church's construction. All labour was entirely voluntary. Much of the fabric of the church was salvaged or donated: smashed 7-Up bottles were added to the exterior stucco to provide texture and colour and many of the fixtures and furnishings came from area churches. The Bad Heart Straw Church was completed in 1954 and stands as a remarkable example of ingenuity and civic spirit. It is also a pioneering example of straw bale construction in the province and possibly the only church so constructed in all of Canada.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.
