Notice of Intent to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2269

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Markerville Lutheran Church, together with the land legally described as: Plan RN21 (XXI), Block 5, Lot 1A, excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located at Markerville, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of the Markerville Lutheran Church lies in its association with Icelandic settlement in Alberta. It is also significant as an excellent and early example of Lutheran church architecture and may be the only Icelandic Lutheran church ever constructed in the province.

In 1888 and 1889, two groups of Icelandic settlers from the United States migrated to Canada. They filed for homestead in a relatively isolated area around the Medicine River and established a number of small rural communities. The community of Tindastoll (later renamed Markerville) developed into the major supply centre for the Icelandic settlers. By the close of the first decade of the 1900s, Markerville boasted a post office, a school, a creamery, a community hall, a hardware store, two general stores, a blacksmith, a butcher, a pool hall and a library. A church to serve the Icelanders' religious needs was not constructed until 1907 - two decades after settlement - possibly because of deep religious divisions within the community. During the mid-1800s, the Icelandic Lutheran community in the United States was split between those who adhered to the generally liberal theology of the Lutheran Church of Iceland and those who followed the more conservative principles of the Norwegian Synod of the American Lutheran Church. In Alberta's Icelandic settlements, social clubs and debating societies often served the same social purpose that the church occupied in other ethnic and religious communities. Religious services in Markerville were carried out by traveling clergymen and were held in private homes and in community halls. A congregation was officially established in 1900. In 1905, a full-time minister was hired and construction of a church began. Community groups, notably the Ladies Aid Society known as "Vonin" began to raise funds for building materials and furnishings. The church was completed in May 1907. The church's full-time, resident minister adhered to the conservative Lutheran tradition. He was dismissed in 1909 after only two years with the congregation. Although he continued to serve on a part-time basis until 1935, the Markerville Lutheran Church was served mainly by traveling ministers. Regular services ceased in 1963.

The Markerville Lutheran Church is an early and excellent example of Lutheran church architecture and may be the only Icelandic Lutheran church ever constructed in Alberta. The simple form of the building, its largely unornamented exterior, and the projecting central tower with steeple are typical of rural Lutheran churches in Alberta. The same sensibility informs the design of the interior space, which features white walls and simple, well-crafted furnishings and finishings. The church remains largely unaltered since its construction and represents one of the earliest, most typical, and most intact of the many historic Lutheran churches constructed in Alberta's rural areas.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Dated this 12th day of May, A.D. 2009.

Lindsay Blackett, Minister.
