Culture and Community Spirit

Notice of Intent to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 1535

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Strome Memorial Hall, together with the land legally described as:

Plan RN67 (LXVII)
Block 3
Lots 4 and 5
Excepting Thereout all Mines and Minerals and municipally located in Strome, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of the Strome Memorial Hall lies in its identity as an excellent example of a small town community hall, important public facilities in Alberta's early history. It also has heritage value as a Memorial Hall erected to honour those who served in the First World War.

Community Halls were important facilities in many rural communities and were often the first public building erected. These versatile, multi-purpose facilities fulfilled the recreational, entertainment and socialization needs of the community, while avoiding the problems associated with using schools and churches for such activities. Used for a wide range of community-oriented activities, halls were typically simple, gable-roofed buildings, often with a boom town front. Interiors were sparse, featuring a large open room with a wood strip floor, easily movable furnishings, a stage, cloak rooms, piano and kitchen. More substantial halls often had usable basements, indoor washroom facilities and a film projection room. The importance of community halls began to wane in the 1950s when television, dedicated movie houses and improvements in motor vehicle infrastructure and efficiency gave people more recreational, entertainment and socialization options and the mobility to pursue them farther a field.

The First World War and the consequent loss of life was a traumatic experience for small communities. Following the war, most communities attempted to memorialize this sacrifice by commissioning cenotaphs and other statuary. Some communities dedicated utilitarian structures, such as non-denominational public halls as memorials. These halls were intended as living memorials that both honoured the war dead and veterans and encouraged community recovery through activities that promoted social cohesion. Memorial halls were essentially the same as community halls, differing only in the presence of the symbolic ornamentation common to all types of war memorials, usually in the form of bronze plaques, honour rolls, cenotaphs, relic weaponry, and patriotic trappings such as flags and regimental standards.

The original Strome Memorial Hall had been built in 1920 to serve as a memorial to the village's war dead and as a community gathering place. Fifteen men from the Strome district lost their lives in the First World War, a devastating loss to a community of less than 300 people. The hall, which had been insured, was destroyed by fire on September 28, 1935. Construction of the current hall began less than three weeks later. A brick chimney on the north elevation and a gable-roofed shed slightly to the south of the hall are the sole remaining elements of the original 1920 building. The hall embodies many of the characteristics typical of community halls. It is a long, rectangular, gable-roofed building, with stucco-clad exterior walls lined with windows. The exterior is devoid of ornamentation with the exception of the west-facing boom town front. This front features a wide, flat-arched vestibule enclosing a double-door entry way, flanked by bulletin boards for displaying playbills and posters. The boom town front also features some Classically-inspired details, some of which are fabricated in plaster and painted a darker colour, such as the stepped parapet with flagpole, faux quoins, faux belt courses and other raised trim details at the corners and flanking the main sign. The interior of the hall is taken up by a large, open space with a wood strip floor. A projector room with two film projectors and a film splicing table is situated above the front lobby and a stage is situated at the east end of the hall. The hall bears a sign reading MEMORIAL HALL and two bronze plaques, bearing the names of the district's fallen soldiers from the First and Second World Wars are affixed to the Hall on either side of the front vestibule.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Monkman Homestead, together with the land legally described as:

All that Portion of the South East Quarter of Section Twenty Seven (27) Township Seventy Two (72) Range Eight (8) West of the Sixth Meridian as Shown on A Plan of Survey of the Said Township Signed At Ottawa on the 15th Day of June A.D. 1915, Described as Follows: Commencing At the South West Corner of the Said Quarter Section thence Northerly along the West Boundary of the Said Quarter Section to Its Intersection With the South Bank of Cutbank Lake, thence Easterly South Easterly North Easterly And South Easterly along the Said Bank of Cutbank Lake to its Intersection With the South Boundary of the Said Quarter Section, thence Westerly along the Said South Boundary to the Point of Commencement, Containing 8.25 Hectares (20.40 Acres) More Or Less.
Excepting Thereout All Mines And Minerals

and municipally located in the County of Grande Prairie No. 1, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The heritage value of the Monkman Homestead lies in its association with early settlement and agriculture in the Peace River district and its connection to Alex Monkman, a pioneering trader, rancher, and farmer in the area.

The township survey of the Peace River Country was begun and the area opened to settlement in 1909. Alex Monkman laid one of the first homestead claims in 1910, filing on a quarter section of land along the southwest bank of Cutbank Lake. Monkman relocated the home he had constructed in 1906 at his ranching operation on Bear Lake to the site and likely erected the extant machine shed and barn during the mid-1910s. The granary was built later, probably in the 1930s. The utilitarian design and humble materials of the buildings express the North American vernacular style typical of frontier structures, emphasizing functionality and pressing need over artistry and elaborate construction. These four buildings provide some of the earliest structural evidence of the initial settlement wave into the Peace River country, the last agricultural frontier in North America to be opened to homesteaders.

Alex Monkman was a prominent figure in the early settlement of the Peace River Country. Descended from Metis of the Red River Settlement, Monkman travelled and worked throughout the North American West during the 1880s and 1890s before arriving on the Grande Prairie in 1899. In the fall of that year, he established a trading post for the Bredin and Cornwall firm at Lake Saskatoon. The post proved successful and attracted Hudson's Bay Company traders and Christian missionaries, both of whom established posts nearby. The Lake Saskatoon Settlement, effectively begun by Monkman, represented the first Euro-Canadian settlement on the Grande Prairie. While at Lake Saskatoon, Monkman created a small farming operation, one of the first in the district. When the Revillon Freres bought out Bredin and Cornwall in 1906, Monkman moved to Bear Lake and set up a ranch. Four years later, he was one of the first to file a homestead claim in the Peace River Country, settling on Cutbank Lake. During his time in Northern Alberta, Monkman was an important figure in the region's public affairs, most notably in his championing of a transportation route from the Peace Country to the Pacific Ocean. From the early 1900s until the late 1930s, he advocated for a new transport avenue - first for trains, later for cars - through a pass in the Rocky Mountains through to Vancouver. Although his proposal was ultimately unsuccessful, the mountain pass was named in his honour and is now incorporated into British Columbia's Monkman Pass Provincial Park.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.
