Chinamans Peak

Approximately 3 km southwest of Canmore.

The origin of this name refers to an incident that allegedly occurred in 1886. A Chinese mine employee named Ha Ling accepted a fifty dollar bet that he could climb to the top of this peak, plant a flag and return within ten hours. He accomplished this feat in about five hours and thirty minutes. The name was used locally for many years before being officially adopted on September 7, 1980. The name is rescinded due to concerns about its potentially derogatory nature.

*Note: the latitude/longitude coordinates are for the highest point of elevation on the feature and correspond with the coordinates for Mount Lawrence Grassi (peak)

Approximately 3 km southwest of Canmore.

The origin of the name for the mountain is Aboriginal and means “the last Nakoda.” The name is derived from the Creation stories of the Stoney Nakoda people. The first Nakoda (or human) to live on the earth was the immortal Iktomni (the Trickster or the Old Man). He possessed special powers and had assisted the Creator in making the earth. Once the earth was created, more Nakoda were created. They chose to live on the eastern slopes of the Canadian Rocky Mountains. At a later time, it became known that Iktomni was granting wishes. Two Nakoda men visited him and asked for their wish. Iktomni replied, “I will grant any wish you desire, but you must understand that once your wish is fulfilled, you cannot change it.” Both men agreed. The first man wished to be very beautiful. Iktomni then commanded, “Do you see that pond of water? Run to it and jump in it.” The Nakoda jumped into the pond and was transformed into a beautiful swan. The second Nakoda said, “My wish is nothing like that. I wish to remain on this earth for as long as it exists.” Iktomni responded, “You shall remain on this earth long after all human beings cease to inhabit it. You will be Ehagay Nakoda: The Last Nakoda.” Iktomni then commanded the man to sit on the ground. The man did as instructed and was immediately transformed into a mountain. [summarized from a text provided by Peter Lazarus Wesley]. The mountain known as Ehagay Nakoda contains the peaks known as Ha Ling Peak and Mount Lawrence Grassi.

The peak is located on Ehagay Nakoda Mountain.

Glen Leslie Church, together with the land legally described as:

The south west quarter of legal subdivision four (4) of section six (6) township seventy two (72) range three (3) west of the sixth meridian, containing 4.05 hectares (10 acres) more or less excepting thereout: (a) all that portion described as follows: commencing at a point on the west boundary of the said section, a distance of two hundred and ninety seven (297) feet from the south west corner thereof, thence easterly and parallel to the south boundary of the said section, four hundred and eighty (480) feet to a point, thence northerly and parallel to the west boundary of the said section, three hundred and sixty three (363) feet more or less, to a point on the north boundary of the said south west quarter section of legal subdivision four (4), thence westerly and along the said north boundary four hundred and eighty (480) feet more or less to the west boundary of the said quarter section, thence southerly along the said west boundary to the point of commencement, containing 1.62 hectares (4 acres) more or less (b) 0.105 hectares (0.26 acre) more or less, for road, as shown on road plan 1168RS
Excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located in the County of Grande Prairie No. 1, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The heritage value of the Glen Leslie Church lies in its architectural significance as a rare example of a log church with exposed exterior walls. This type of construction was once common for churches and other buildings in Alberta, but extant examples of this construction technique are now rare.

Typically, one of the first institutions or buildings that settlers in new areas desire is a church or a place in which to hold worship services and to come together as a community. For the settlers in the Glen Leslie area east of Grand Prairie, worship services were initially held in the home of the region's leading resident, Thomas Leslie, and presided over by Presbyterian minister Reverend Alexander Forbes. As the area's population grew, a dedicated church building was deemed necessary. Rev. Forbes led initiatives to build churches at a number of locations in the area, notably at Grande Prairie (1911), Bezanson (1914) and Spring Creek (1914). All of the churches were gable-roofed, log structures. In the winter of 1913, Leslie and Forbes jointly acquired ten acres of land upon which to build a church. Construction on the simple rectangular-shaped, gable-roofed building began the following spring and was carried out by volunteers from the community. Construction on the church was completed in October 1915. Although the Glen Leslie Church was ostensibly a Presbyterian church, the congregation included adherents of various Protestant denominations and it eventually became a United Church. While purpose-built for use as a church, the building was also used as a school from 1918 to 1928. The Glen Leslie Church offered regular worship services until 1964. Since that time, it has been used occasionally for worship services and more regularly as a community centre.

Although the Glen Leslie area had been opened for settlement in 1910, transportation around and access to the region remained difficult. Consequently, the Glen Leslie Church, like many of the area's early buildings, was constructed of readily available materials. The church was built of locally harvested logs, which were stripped of their bark, partially squared, and laid horizontally. The logs were joined at the corners by hand-cut, dove-tailed notches. The church was weatherproofed with chinking between the logs. Wood shingles, originally pine, covered the roof and the gable ends. Entry to the church is gained through the south elevation via a five-panel door, which is flanked by double-hung windows. A row of three, evenly spaced, double-hung windows run along both the east and west elevations. The window and doorway openings are accentuated with trim intended to resemble segmental arches. Although many early churches in rural Alberta were constructed of logs, these buildings were often demolished, sold, or upgraded as finances and available building technology and materials improved. With its exposed-log exterior walls the Glen Leslie Church is an excellent and rare example of this early and once common building technique.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.
