Notice of Intent to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource (Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2292

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Community Services intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Queen's Hotel, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 92B
Block 436
The West 28 Feet of Lot 26 and all of Lot 27 and municipally located in Fort Macleod, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The Queen's Hotel is a fine example of the kind of substantial hotels built in Alberta's urban centres during their boom periods. Its heritage value lies in its contribution to the heritage character of the Fort Macleod Provincial Historic Area.

In early Alberta, certain communities developed as centralized service points. These communities attracted a number of essential businesses and services, including hotels. Hotels provided short-term lodging for farmers and ranchers in town to do business, for tourists looking for comfortable accommodations, for newcomers evaluating a community as a place to settle, and for commercial travellers looking for sales and investment opportunities. Through their associated restaurants, taverns and pool rooms, hotels also served as recreational centres for a region's established population. In many communities, hotels were often the most substantial buildings and would be constantly improved with the latest technological and architectural improvements to attract business from competing establishments or to market themselves to particular classes of clients.

In the late 1800s and early 1900s, Macleod was an important administrative, distribution and service centre for southern Alberta. Unlike many Alberta communities, where the town layout was determined by the railway right-of-ways, Macleod pre-existed the railways and its main street and hotels are located some distance north of the tracks. Despite this distance between the railway and Macleod's established commercial district, the town flourished during the years between 1897 and 1914 with many substantial sandstone buildings being constructed, including the Queen's Hotel.

The Queen's Hotel was established in 1886 and consisted of two frame buildings on Macleod's main street. In 1896, Harry Stedman purchased the Queen's Hotel and, in 1903, began construction on a much more substantial hotel, which is the current building. The new hotel was an impressive three-storey, frame building on a slightly U-shaped plan with primary exterior walls clad in rough-faced, locally quarried sandstone. It boasted a large lobby, bar and restaurant on the ground floor and 40 rooms arranged around central hallways on the upper two floors. Adding to its air of sophistication were design elements that included sandstone windows sills and belt courses and, notably, a classically-inspired pressed metal, bracketed cornice running along the parapet of the primary facades. Upon completion, the new Queen's Hotel was touted as Macleod's finest lodgings and was the most expensive hotel in town. The Queen's Hotel soon became the lodging of choice for business people, government officials and well-heeled visitors to the area.

Although there were older brick buildings in Macleod, the Queen's Hotel was the first substantial sandstone building in town. The hotel's robust construction allowed it to survive the 1906 fire that devastated Macleod's main street. The hotel's stately appearance, the local availability of sandstone, and restrictive building codes in the wake of the fire resulted in the establishment of sandstone as the preferred construction material in pre-First World War Macleod. Like many small town hotels throughout Alberta, the fortunes of the Queen's Hotel declined in the later decades of the twentieth century. The hotel became primarily a downtown tavern with low-cost apartments on the upper floors. Nonetheless, with its impressive scale and form, sandstone construction and classically-inspired details, the Queen's Hotel continues to serve as a defining anchor in Fort Macleod's historic commercial district.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Dated this 29th day of February, A.D. 2012.
