Piper Creek (creek)

Located at:

Lat/Long: 50°41'9"N & 115°1'36"W to 50°40'22"N & 114°59'12"W

Flows east through the valley between Tombstone Mountain and Elpoca Mountain. It enters the Elbow River, approximately 50 km west of Turner Valley.

This name commemorates Norma Piper, wife of George Pocaterra, who is also commemorated through numerous geographical feature names. Norma Piper was born in Calgary and attained world-wide recognition as an opera singer. While studying music in Italy she met George Pocaterra, who owned the Buffalo Hills Ranch in the Highwood River region. The two were soon married. Norma accompanied her husband on many of his trips to the Kananaskis Lakes. She became well known in Calgary for teaching music to a select group of pupils. Norma Piper died in 1983. The name was first proposed in 1986, but was rejected due to questions about Norma Piper's connection to the region. Further research solidified Norma Piper's connection with the area and found evidence that the name had been in use locally since the 1930s and was also being used in many guide books for the region.

The origin of this name is not known. It first appears on a 1948 federal government map and was officially approved by the federal government in 1958. There was confusion about the location of the creek's headwaters. The 2003 decision officially establishes the locations of the headwaters.
