Culture

Notice of Intent to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2258

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Reach Block, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 92B
Block 432
The West Half of Lot 24
Excepting Thereout All Mines and Minerals and municipally located in the Town of Fort Macleod, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The Reach Block is an example of a common commercial building constructed in Alberta's urban centres during the early years of the twentieth century. It is significant due to its contribution to the heritage character of the Fort Macleod Provincial Historic Area.

Fort Macleod was a significant urban centre in southern Alberta during the late-1800s and early-1900s. Its commercial district became known for the prolific use of sandstone in its many substantial commercial buildings. In 1906, the Reach store, which sold groceries, dry goods and clothing, burned down, along with most of the town's commercial district. In 1907, local stonemason Murdo MacLean, who worked on many buildings in the town, was hired to build a new home for the business. The new store, the Reach Block, was built in a pattern consistent with other commercial structures erected in Macleod at the time. The two storey structure was built of sandstone and brick, which was required by a town by-law aimed at preventing fires, and directly abuts similar buildings on either side. Its impressive front facade consists of rough-hewn, locally-quarried sandstone blocks, similar to those used on many buildings in the town's commercial district. The second storey features three windows – a wide, central window surmounted by a semi-elliptical arch, flanked by two narrower openings with splayed, sandstone block lintels. The interior ground floor features a large open space, suitable for retail operations. Unlike many similar retail buildings, which housed offices or residential apartments on the second floor, the second floor of the Reach Block, which is accessed by a wide staircase towards the back, was part of the retail operations.

Like most buildings from Fort Macleod's early development period, the Reach Block underwent substantial changes to meet the evolving requirements of the retail and grocery sectors as well as the preferences of the owners and customers. The historic storefront was replaced by a modern aluminum and plate glass storefront that echoes the historic arrangement and other original or historic elements, such as the signage-bearing cornices and central pediment were lost and the interior was dramatically altered. Despite these changes, the Reach Block retains its impressive sandstone facade and general design. These elements make the Reach Block a substantial contributor to the overall character of the Fort Macleod Provincial Historic Area.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Dated this 25th day of April, A.D. 2014.
