Decisions on Geographical Names

(Historical Resources Act)

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to Section 18, Subsection 3 of the Historical Resources Act the following decisions on geographical names were duly authorized on July 24, 2014.

APPROVED/CONFIRMATION OF LOCATION

NTS Map Sheet 82 O/03 – “Canmore”

Lusk Creek
(creek)

NTS Map Sheet: 820/03 – “Canmore”
ATS: 15-24-8-W5
Latitude/Longitude: 51° 02’ 40” N & 115° 01’ 48” W
Description: A tributary of the Kananaskis River.

NOT

NTS Map Sheet: 82 J/15 – “Bragg Creek”
ATS:23-7-W5
Latitude/Longitude: 50° 29’ N & 114° 58’ W
Description: A tributary of Jumpingpound Creek

This decision corrects an error found in some publications and geographical names databases. Lusk Creek is historically understood to be a tributary of the Kananaskis River on the National Topographical System (NTS) Map Sheet 82 O/03. The Canadian Geographical Names Database also included a second entry for a Lusk Creek, showing it as a tributary of Jumpingpound Creek on NTS Map Sheet 82 J/15, which is part of a different watershed. Research determined that the second Lusk Creek entry was the result of a cartographical error made in the 1940s. To prevent confusion of having two identically named creeks in such close proximity, a decision was made to confirm Lusk Creek as only a tributary of the Kananaskis River. The record of Lusk Creek as a tributary of Jumpingpound Creek is rescinded and removed from official inventories and databases of geographical names.

Lusk Creek is named for Thomas Lusk, an American cowboy from Texas. Starting in 1867, Lusk drove herds of cattle from Texas to Kansas and Montana. In 1895, sensing that the ranching way of life was ending in the American mid-west, he drove a small herd of cattle (possibly stolen) across the border into Canadian territory and established a small ranch in the Morley region. He left a wife and two children behind in Texas. After his arrival in Canada, he also worked as a guide for Tom Wilson and Jimmy Simpson out of Banff. He guided Martin Nordegg into the coal-producing Brazeau region and worked frequently as a guide for the Geological Survey of Canada. Lusk was famed for his drinking and his legendary temper, which often raised questions about his capabilities as a guide. However, his services were always demanded by return clients. Towards the end of his life, Lusk returned to Texas, but was rejected by his now adult sons. He left Texas to return to Canada, but died on the journey.

NTS Map Sheet 83 I/16 – “Plamondon”

Gourin
(locality)

ATS: 23-67-17-W4

Latitude/Longitude: 54° 49' 11" N & 112° 28' 23" W

Description: At the intersection of Highway 55 and Range Road 171, approximately nine kilometres southwest of Plamondon and three kilometres south of Charron Lake.

Starting in 1914, this area of Alberta was settled largely by people from the region of Brittany in France. To serve the growing population, a post office was established in August 1923. Joseph Ulliac, the first post master, named the post office for the Breton community of Gourin, France. A store, café and stopping house soon opened and Gourin became a transit point and stopping-over location for trips through the area. The name was also used for the local school district, the Gourin School District No. 4755, which was erected in January 1937, and was used to loosely describe the surrounding region of settlement. The post office closed in July 1967. In 1970, the Government of Alberta recommended that the name Gourin be retained, but that the type of location be changed from “post office” to “locality.” Federal naming authorities mistakenly rescinded the name. Although the error was discovered and acknowledged a few months later, the error was never rectified. In 2014, residents of the area and descendants of the original settlers requested that the name be reinstated.
